

Native PDF layout for Elixir

Rendro renders deterministic business PDFs from Elixir data.

No Chrome, browser automation, or hidden webpage layout step.

Generated by Rendro itself from the same public recipe pipeline.

The manual SHA-256 is published outside this PDF for byte checks.

Use this manual as a fit check; use HexDocs for API reference depth.

Fit Check

Use Rendro when your app owns structured document data.

Good fits: invoices, statements, receipts, reports, certificates.

Use HTML-to-PDF when browser CSS fidelity is the requirement.

Boundaries

No arbitrary HTML/CSS rendering.

No blanket PDF/A or PDF/UA claim.

pdfium-render rasters are not GUI-viewer proof.

Complex scripts require the shaping seam.

Transforms, clipping, and gradients remain deferred path work.

Invoice

Standard invoice from Elixir data through the canonical Invoice recipe.

Determinism Proof

assets/rendro/artifacts.json records source PDF hashes and PNG hashes.
The manifest also records renderer metadata and the manual.pdf hash.
Run `mix rendro.launch_artifacts.check` in a pinned pdfium environment.
The task regenerates and compares the full artifact set.

Path primitive proof

The certificate frame and diagram are authored as Rendro Path data.
Both render through the same standard pipeline.

The required docs contract checks source PDFs and the manual.
The advisory raster lane checks PNG raster drift.
